Usually I save gco files onto a SD card to print offline. There I noticed that it is rather easy to insert the card, but hard to remove it. The gap in between the card and the front panel is so small that I cannot pull the card with the force needed. So I grinded off the edge of the front panel. Now I can easily remove the card without tools.

Perhaps the manufacturer didn't think of thick western fingers when they designed the part 😊
